I am trying to get the socket information from the server side and setting it as a variable in Vue. Below is the code: import Vue from "vue"; import socketio from "socket.io-client"; Vue.config.productionTip = false; const socket = socketio.connect(process.env.VUE_APP_URL); const app = new Vue({ el: '#app', data: { isOnline: false, socket: socket, }, methods: { socket.on('stateChange', (data) => { console.log(data); this.isOnline = data.online; console.log(this.isOnline); this.socket.emit('stateChange', data);

It aims at improving the playback of formats that don't have native or supportable code. It uses a Perl API to perform all the computations, so it should be easy to modify the code. QCD Player Helper is built for playback of various media formats. For each format, the class contains two classes: the first one is dedicated to play the media, and the second one is dedicated to create a "metadata object". QCD Player Helper supports: * MP3 * Vorbis * Musepack * Speex * FLAC * WAV * MP4 * Protected WMA * AAC If QCD Media Player is not installed, installation of QCD Player Helper is enough. Installation of QCD Player Helper comes with an explanation file that shows how to install it. QCD Player Helper is used in a 'deep' environment and works as a wrapper. It also has 'nested' classes that abstract the Player and Player Helper classes (same as the Player does in QCD Media Player for the basic class). QCD Player Helper is provided for free, but requires compilation. It comes with a simple installer (see docs/compilation.txt) and docs directory. This package is provided for Debian or Ubuntu Linux. You can also get the sources. QCD Player Helper QCD Player Helper is a simple media playback helper class. It aims at improving the playback of formats that don't have native or supportable code.
