SAMYUNGÂ .A government shutdown has left many children and workers without income – and a little bit hungry. Vacant workers come in late at night to the restaurants along the Pennsylvania Avenue corridor. Volunteers and businesses open their doors again during the day. “It’s like music to my ears when people open up their doors,” said Tony Padovano of Joe More, a prime rib restaurant that is one of the many eateries along the corridor that provide free food to families who have no other options. “Sometimes families can’t afford their rent, and things like this bring people together,” said Padovano. Jim McQuaig, owner of Fran’s White Lilac Cafe, said he opened his coffee shop, on Pennsylvania Avenue near 18th Street, two weeks ago because he wanted to
