An 87-year-old woman died from a fire that began in her Arizona home Tuesday, authorities said. The cause of the blaze is unknown, but investigators at the Gila County Sheriff's Office are looking into whether she had a fire in the past, the sheriff's office said. Ospitalia, who was found by neighbors, suffered third-degree burns to her legs and back in the fire. She was taken to a Tucson hospital, where she was pronounced dead. The cause of Ospitalia's death has not been determined, The Arizona Daily Star reported. An autopsy will be conducted by the Tucson Medical Examiner's Office. A phone call to the Gila County Sheriff's Office was not returned as of Wednesday morning. UPDATE: Neighbors tell Fox 10 that Ospitalia was very important to them, and some even say they wish they had tried to get her out before the fire broke out, but they just couldn't. Many believe that Ospitalia's son had recently passed away, and that was the reason why she was so immersed in her family life. "You never know what people's situations are in life, and at the end of the day, I believe that person paid the ultimate price for her son," neighbor Amber Bell said. Ospitalia was very sick and had Parkinson's disease, and had actually died in a hospital last year, says neighbor Eric Ospitalia. She has been on hospice care for about three weeks, she said. "My mother is very responsible," Eric Ospitalia said. He has also heard his mother's first name is Hope, but he cannot remember for sure. However, in this case, he will not be grieving because of her death. "I'm not really upset about it because I know what kind of person she is.
