"I'm sorry to learn that many people are still worried and hurt by the recent earthquake and tsunami," he said. "I hope that everyone will understand that our only task is to be together as one with the people of Japan." Below is a list of the dead, including those killed on the day and those who died later from their injuries, a tally of the confirmed dead and the number of people unaccounted for: The number of deceased is expected to rise. Kyodo News Agency said a high school student in Otsu, near the disaster zone, was killed when a tree fell on him after a strong wind on Tuesday. Nagano prefectural police said an 80-year-old woman who survived the earthquake had died of a stroke. As well, a woman who was badly injured in the tsunami died from her injuries. And two people who were hospitalized by the sea-lashed tsunami, one of them by a typhoon, died, Kyodo reported. The Rev. Marcel Gahan, who heads a church group mission in Otsu, said that Sunday Mass was being held in his church for the first time since the disaster, with about 200 people attending. In the Hindu Shinto shrine, he said, priests were scattered in makeshift stations set up around the town, sharing food and prayer offerings with the people there, people who had fled to Otsu and surrounding areas seeking refuge from the tsunami. Travolta confirms return to TV September 13, 2009 Travolta confirms return to TV John Travolta has confirmed that he will return to TV for his new hit show's first episode. The star said he is keen to continue performing and that 'if the audience response is there, he will have to say 'yes' to the project.' Travolta will reportedly star in the show Treme, which is based on the lives of the residents of the city of New Orleans. "It's going to be a great show," he said at the star-studded premiere. Travolta will also appear in the upcoming film The Love Guru. Photo caption: John T
