What's new:

"Tokyo Tattoo Girls" is a song by Japanese group Kanjani8, under the pseudonyms and. It was used as the theme song to the anime television series Tokyo Tattoo Girls, and the song charted at number one on the Japanese

Hot 100. The song was a breakthrough in the band's career, both in terms of its sheer popularity and because of the song's controversial nature for a group that had already performed ballads. The song was also the second anime theme song to chart at number one, the first being Man with a Mission "Recorder" by Nanase Aikawa. Production The song originated as because the group's singles created by then had so-so commercial performance, dropping significantly from late 2011. Additionally the group experienced troubles with the music label Avex, whom criticized the group's height and developed difference on their management style. The group was on a hiatus at the time of the song's creation because of their decision, as well as the time period the group that consisted of 8 artists has been around. Because there were only eight members of the group, they decided to use the name and. In June 2012, the group had first held a consultation. Eventually, they decided to make use of the "Anata no Ko" (Anata no Ko~Ame mo Debutu~, 「Anata no Ko」) campaign website, in which they would provide the users to have their questions answered and have their opinions kept and reflected into the music lyrics. The seven members in the group – Seiko Nakayama, Kanako Toda, Rio Okawa, Karen Fujii, Yokoyama Sayaka, Chinatsu Akasaki and Hitomi Shimatani – spent about half of the month answering the questions. The lyrics were written by members of the group and checked and edited by Yomi Hirasaka. The group was confident enough with the lyric writing to let it go to the people, as it thought the consumers would be able to understand what they wanted to say through their vocal ability. The chorus of the song were also actually sung by members of the group, especially Seiko Nakayama and Hitomi Shimatani, instead of Kanako Toda, because of the latter's weak voice, although Hitomi's best performance of the single was originally the chorus. On June 29, 2012, the song was chosen by Avex Music Agency as the theme song for the
