Every iOS developer need to know these options, and to the maximum extent possible, a quick way to manage files. Today, I'll show you how to manage file and directory recursively, and I'll use it to copy a file, upload an image to a website, and push an image to the cloud. How to manage files on iOS By default, iOS organizes files and folders in the filesystem in two different ways. Files and folders are organized by the storage type they're contained in. For example, all the photos in your iPhoto library are in the Photos storage type, and all your music is stored in the Music storage type. Next, files and folders are organized according to the operating system. On an iPhone, photos are in the Photos.app storage type, while music is in the Music.app storage type. On an iPad, these storage types don't exist. All photos and music are in the Photos and Music storage types respectively. If you're trying to access a file or folder that's not on your device, you need to find it in iCloud. To find a file or folder that you want to access from iCloud, follow these steps: Open the App Store app on your device. Tap the Updates tab. Select the Update button, and tap Install. Find the iCloud Drive icon on your home screen. Tap the folder or file you want to find. If you want to copy or move a file or folder from one storage type to another, you need to use the Terminal app and transfer the file or folder to iCloud Drive. To transfer a file or folder to iCloud Drive, follow these steps: Launch the Terminal app. Type mv [source] [destination]. To copy a file to iCloud Drive, add the -f flag: mv [-f] [source] [destination]. To move a file or folder to iCloud Drive, type mv [source] [destination]. To move a folder to a different location, add the -P flag: mv [-P] [source] [destination]. To upload an image to a website, you need to first take a screenshot. To take a screenshot, follow these steps: Open the Photos app. Tap the Screen Shot button, and then press the Home button to take a screenshot. Tap the image you want to upload in the screen shot. Tap Share. In 2edc1e01e8
