Record macros during a PDF document viewing session. Set Keycommands during viewing to automatically record the Macros used to view the PDF document, then use the macros to replay the document. You can also choose to automatically replay the last saved macro or the last used macro. As the PDF document is rendered a series of keycommands that are entered using the Keycommands Menu in the ribbon, are recorded. You can choose what to record, such as the name of the Bookmark, Toc entries, page and the current page number. You can choose to only record a list of actions, or record a list of items. The Macros recorded are typically entered by using the right click menu, however you can use the Ribbon Macros Menu to record the macros. The Macros are stored in a folder on the hard drive. The Macros are then automatically imported and played back at your command. KEYMACRO automatically re-plays the last used macro, last saved macro or the last recorded macro. KEYMACRO has the ability to save the Macros from any document on your computer, or even to record a series of Keycommands used to view the document. KEYMACRO supports both Acrobat Reader and Acrobat Pro. Manual Save From the keycommands menu, use the check box at the top of the menu to save the last recorded macros to a text file. The macros are saved in the same folder they were recorded in. Once saved a file is created with the name of the document with the extension.txt. This text file can then be loaded in any text editor and further edited as required. NOTE: If you want to create a PDF file with the Macros, then you must use the record macro button (in the top ribbon) to start recording a macro. Automatic Import The Macros can also be automatically imported, when the computer boots. It is an easy process. Press CTRL-ALT-T and select the folder where the macros are saved. Press the Import button (in the top ribbon) and follow the on screen instructions. Import For Macros that have been saved from any document on the computer. The Macros can also be automatically imported, when the computer boots. It is an easy process. Press CTRL-ALT-T and select the folder where the macros are saved. Press the Import button (in the top ribbon) and follow the on screen instructions. Split If you have a list of PDF files that you
